

short bio:

Elisabetta Marangoni studied at the University of Biological Science in Bologna (Italy) and did the PhD at the Institut Gustave Roussy, in Villejuif (France). She joined Institut Curie in Paris as post-doc and is principal investigator since 2004 at the Translational Research Department. Her work focuses on the identification of new therapeutic strategies and predictive biomarkers in breast cancer. She 20 years of experience in developing PDX models of breast cancer for therapeutic and biomarkers studies.